The magnificent book

Once upon a time there was a magic book that looked like a tree, and a cloud at the same time. Its branches and leaves were sheets of paper and every sheet could fly like a bird. Every time someone read a page, it would fly away to go find mysterious places, dream worlds, adventures and heroes, witches, princes an enchanted human beings, animals and monsters.

This peculiar book could even transform to almost anything it wished. Sometimes it could be a plane and travel over the city and some other times a cook, with all the recipes you can imagine. It could prepare fancy dinner parties or just a plain sandwich in a minute or two. And of course it would tell lots of stories all the time. Children loved its delicious maffins, the chocolate cakes and the vanilla and strawberry icecream. It could also make fantastic cinnamon rolls and tasty, but healthy hamburgers with crispy french fries and fresh salads.

Tom was a little boy, who lived nearby. He was not doing so well at school. He got low marks and he was really disappointed. He even thought to drop out of school. Why would he care for that stupid school anymore? His teacher, his classmates, his parents believed he was not able to learn anything at all. "You're lazy, idiot, you do not care, you're not going to do anything good in your life". Poor Tom could not understand all those difficult subjects, how could he? All he liked to do was to travel in magic worlds, fight with mighty enemies, get on pirate boats, kill fierce dragons and monsters.

Suddenly a dreadful monster appeared right over his head. It was hairy, it missed several teeth, it was huge and a bright light came out of its forehead. It was standing upside down and it smiled. Tom was really scared at first, but then he thought that this monster looked silly and goodhearted, so he said: "Hello! Who are you?" "Oh! Hi! I'm...I'm I don't know. I forgot.

I haven't told anyone my name for such a long time, that I forgot it. Don't worry you can help me remember it". "Alright" said Tom. "Tell me where you came from, then". "Hm! That's easy. I was looking at some people swimming at the beach. But they were not very clever. They were throwing all kinds of things in the water, plastic bags, trash, tin cans, bottles, anything. They did not consider how harmful this is for the animals or the fish. Before that I was flying over a city but there was so much smog that I could not breathe. Everywhere I could see cars and fumes and factories. It was awful, I tell you, just awful!"

Some people were leaving that place, since they could not live there anymore.”

“Oh! God! I must do something, I live in the city, my family, my friends. We should tell them, we should warn them”.

“But you are just a little boy, who doesn't like school. What can you do? You can only dream of fights and wars and monsters. But there is a real monster, called pollution. You can't fight it, unless you study hard (which you know you don't like) to find a way to make people understand. There is NOTHING you can do, my friend.

Nothing!” Tom thought about it for some time and then said: “You are wrong! I can do it. I know, I can. I will study and I'll tell people all about the pollution, you'll see" Tom left in a hurry. "Wait, my name... is the Magnificent Book!" The book changed its form again. Tom waved goodbye and kept walking home. He had to talk to his parents and his friends and his teacher and the whole world. No one would laugh at him ever again. Now he had a real war to fight. And he would win, he knew it.
